Order ECC/461/2013 ${ }^{1}$ and CNMV Circular $4 / 2013^{2}$, later amended by CNMV Circular $7 / 2015^{3}$, mark the first-time implementation in Spain of a unified format for reporting on the remuneration of members of listed company boards of directors. Although such disclosure has been mandatory since the approval of the Sustainable Economy Act 2/2011 of 4 March, which introduced a new Article 61 ter into the Securities Market Act 24/1988 of 28 July, it was not until 2013 that provision was made for a standardised format that facilitates the comparative analysis of data.

This report presents, in aggregate terms, the main features of the remuneration policies and practices applied to the directors of listed companies, as gleaned from the information that each must include in its Annual Directors' Remuneration Report (hereinafter, ADRR).

Chapter I summarises key developments in the remuneration accruing to listed company directors in 2016, which are analysed in greater detail over the remaining chapters of the report.

Chapter II examines the amounts paid to directors in the 137 listed companies filing ADRRs.

Chapter III - principles of remuneration policy - describes some of the most common practices of listed companies when defining remuneration policies, along with their choice of criteria to determine levels of pay and its allocation to each director. This Chapter was prepared using information provided by all Ibex 35 companies and a sample of 40 non-Ibex listed companies - 25 from the group of companies with market capitalisation exceeding 500 million euros and 15 more with a lower level of capitalisation.

[^0]CNMV
Annual Report
on the Remuneration
of Directors of Listed
Companies

The criteria used in defining this sample were to include all Ibex 35 companies in view of their size and market capitalisation, and to choose, from among companies not on the benchmark index, a selection of those filing more complex directors' remuneration policies spanning a diversity of items.

The report is supplemented by an annex of statistical tables based on data from the ADRRs filed by the 137 listed companies.

I. Key conclusions from 2016

The following is a summary of the key developments in the remuneration of directors of listed companies in 2016:

Remuneration accrued during 2016

- The average remuneration accruing to the boards of directors of listed companies amounted to 3.2 million euros, $7.5 \%$ down on the previous year. This fall mainly reflects the $12.7 \%$ reduction in average remuneration paid at companies that do not belong to the Ibex 35, together with a $5 \%$ reduction in Ibex 35 companies.

However, stripping out the non-recurrent payment of 15.9 million euros made by one firm (Abengoa) in 2015 in severance payments and other benefits given to two of its directors and the 21.6 million euros awarded by another company (Talgo) to two executive directors, we find that the average remuneration per board of listed companies did not change substantially with respect to the previous year.

- Average annual remuneration per director stood at 348,000 euros, an increase of $1.2 \%$ on the previous year. This increase was largely due to the higher sums paid to executive directors, particularly in companies not belonging to the Ibex 35, and, to a lesser extent, to external directors, both in Ibex 35 companies and in companies not belonging to the index.
- The main criteria used to determine the directors' individual remuneration are the responsibilities of their board positions. Accordingly, the highest pay levels among Ibex 35 companies corresponded to executive chairman of the board, who received 3.86 million euros on average ( 3.45 million euros in 2015), continuing down the ranks with 706,000 euros for non-executive chairman ( 763 ,000 euros in 2015), 2.65 million euros for chief executives ( 3.05 million euros in 2015) and 2.03 million euros for remaining executive directors (1.68 million euros in 2015).

Among non-Ibex 35 companies, the highest levels corresponded to chief executives, with average pay of 918,000 euros (719,000 euros in 2015), followed by executive board chairman, with 748,000 euros ( 741,000 euros in 2015) and remaining executive directors with 553,000 euros (557,000 euros in 2015). Finally, the average remuneration of non-executive chairman was 140,000 euros (143,000 euros in 2015).

Fixed remuneration is the largest pay component, accounting for $52 \%$ of the total ( $54 \%$ in non-Ibex 35 companies and $50 \%$ in Ibex 35 companies). Variable remuneration, including the value of share awards and gains on options exercised, accounts for $37 \%$ ( $42 \%$ in Ibex 35 and $30 \%$ in non-Ibex 35 companies), attendance fees for $5 \%(3 \%$ in Ibex 35 and $9 \%$ in non-Ibex 35 companies), with the rest corresponding to severance payments and other remuneration items.

Remuneration policies

- The pay differentiation between directors in respect strictly of their board activity (leaving aside any executive functions) derives from their membership or otherwise of board committees and their attendance at meetings (remunerated through attendance fees).
- All Ibex 35 members and $80 \%$ of non-Ibex 35 companies in the sample have formal short-term (annual) variable remuneration schemes in place for executive directors. Awards under these schemes are generally based on two internal parameters: one quantitative, relating to the evolution of operating profits or net profits, and another qualitative, relating to the performance directly attributable to the executive office held. Another common feature, appearing in $50 \%$ of schemes, is the inclusion of some qualitative assessment criterion.
- $\quad 57 \%$ of the companies analysed (27 Ibex 35 members and 16 non-Ibex companies) operate long-term incentive plans, the most common being share-settled schemes ( $45 \%$ ), cash-settled schemes - multi-year bonuses - ( $32 \%$ ), and mixed schemes $(20 \%)$ paid partly in shares and partly in cash. For the remaining $3 \%$ of schemes, the companies did not specify the payment instrument, an aspect that is analysed when the company is subject to a substantive review.
- Long-term savings schemes, which involve making contributions to pension plans or equivalent schemes or assuming long-term payment commitments (which generally cover contingencies, such as retirement, death or incapacity), are less prevalent among non-Ibex companies ( $45 \%$ compared with $65 \%$ in Ibex 35 members).
- The proportion of firms reporting the existence of severance clauses was $74 \%$ among Ibex 35 companies and $40 \%$ among the rest.
- When ADRRs were submitted to the advisory vote of general meetings held in 2016, votes in favour amounted to over $95 \%$ of total votes cast at $43 \%$ of Ibex 35 companies ( $40 \%$ in the 2015 meetings) and at $51 \%$ of non-Ibex 35 companies ( $41 \%$ in the 2015 meetings).

Compliance with unified ADRR format

As a result of the supervisory work performed on the reports submitted by listed companies, the CNMV has identified the following aspects that listed companies need to work on in order to improve the quality of the information provided:

- Some companies do not adequately report the amount of accumulated funds, vested or otherwise, in long-term saving schemes in favour of directors, especially when such schemes have been outsourced. Furthermore, they do not always explain in sufficient detail the conditions of directors' vested economic rights or the compatibility of the benefits of long-term saving systems with severance payments. Nor do they provide clear information on the time that the director has the right to receive the corresponding economic benefits, which is sometimes established at the time the director ceases to work at the company (even if this takes place prior to the normal retirement age (which, in practice, converts this type of remuneration into a severance payment).
- There are some sections that are completed particularly unevenly by the companies included in the sample, both in terms of the length and level of detail and also in the approach. This is particularly the case in sections that describe the principles behind the remuneration policy and the risk management measures relating to remuneration, as well as the tables relating to share-based remuneration.
- Companies generally describe the performance assessment criteria linked to variable remuneration, but not the measurement methods and parameters used to determine whether such criteria have been met. ADRRs rarely include a detailed explanation of the relative importance of variable remuneration items compared with fixed items (remuneration mix).

(*) Including executive chairmen and chief executive officers

- The average remuneration accruing to the boards of directors of listed companies ${ }^{4}$ was 3.2 million euros in 2016, $7.5 \%$ down on the previous year

This fall is largely explained by a one-off increase recorded in 2015 in two companies not belonging to the Ibex 35 . In one of them ${ }^{5}$, remuneration rose by 15.9 million euros on the combined effect of severance payments to two directors and a long-service bonus paid to its former executive chairman. The other ${ }^{6}$, admitted to trading in 2015, granted its two executive directors share-based remuneration which generated payments totalling 21.6 million euros.

Stripping out these extraordinary items, the average remuneration of listed company boards remains broadly flat with respect to 2015 .

- Average remuneration per director in the post for the full year stood at 348,000 euros, an increase of $1.2 \%$ on the previous year.

This rise reflects the maturity of long-term incentive schemes, and as the calculation is made for the full year, the one-off increases in 2015 of the aforementioned two companies have not been taken into account.

- Average remuneration per executive director stood at 1.4 million euros, an increase of $2.4 \%$ on 2015 . This increase mostly reflects the maturity of multi-year share schemes.
- Average remuneration of external directors amounted to 119,000 euros, a year-on-year increase of $1.7 \%$.
- The absence of the extraordinary remuneration items that were given in 2015 has led to an increase in the relative weighting of fixed remuneration, which continues to be the most significant remuneration component.
- Variable components were more important in companies with higher capitalisation.

There are two companies ${ }^{7}$ in which the variable remuneration systems accounted for over $80 \%$ of the remuneration accruing to the directors over the year.

Remuneration per director

The main criterion used in listed companies to determine the amount of the remuneration of each director is the level of responsibility of the office held on the board. The highest average remuneration corresponded to executive chairmen, followed by chief executive officers, executive directors and non-executive directors. However, in the highest percentiles and in the non-Ibex 35 sector, the remuneration of chief executives was higher than that of the executive chairmen.

Table 2 shows the average remuneration and percentiles ${ }^{8}$ of the executive and non-executive chairmen, chief executives, executive directors and external directors:

- Remuneration of executive chairmen in 2016 varied according to the size of the companies: average remuneration in non-Ibex 35 companies remained broadly unchanged, while average remuneration in companies with high market capitalisation rose by $12 \%$ on 2015 as a result of the maturity of sharebased remuneration schemes.

Average remuneration of non-executive chairmen fell from 265,000 euros in 2015 to 255,000 euros in 2016.

- Average remuneration of executive directors, excluding chairmen and chief executives, rose by $13.4 \%$ in 2016, largely as a result of the growth in variable remuneration in Ibex 35 companies.

8 In presenting the results of the analysis run on the ADRRs of listed companies, the following statistical references were considered:

- Company percentiles $10,25,50,75$ and 90: reference points of the data from the sample of companies analysed below which there are only $10 \%, 25 \%, 50 \%, 75 \%$ and $90 \%$ of said companies.
- When there are fewer than three observations, only the median is considered.

- Average remuneration of proprietary directors stood at 86,000 euros. Fixed pay, at $60 \%$ of the total, is the single largest remuneration component for this director category, followed by attendance fees at $15.9 \%$.
- The remuneration of independent directors stood at 114,000 euros, broadly the same as in 2015. A total of five independent directors ${ }^{9}$, in three companies, received remuneration of greater than 500,000 euros.

The largest remuneration component for independent directors was fixed pay earned for serving as board members.

- The average remuneration of other external directors was 202,000 euros, $7.8 \%$ less than in 2015 . This reduction can mainly be explained by the maturity of a variable remuneration scheme of one director who previously performed senior management functions.

Analysis of remuneration by item

Company ADRRs must state the remuneration accruing to each director, distinguishing between the different items that make up the total remuneration. In the following section we summarise the main developments relative to each remuneration item based on the information provided by listed companies.

Salaries

This item comprises the amount of non-variable remuneration earned by directors for performing their executive functions, and therefore does not include remuneration received as a result of their status as director (attendance fees, etc.).

Table 3 sets out the average remuneration and percentiles of the salaries of executive chairmen, chief executives and executive directors:

| :--- | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | ---: |
| (thousand euros) | Average | Percentile 10 | Percentile 25 | Percentile 50 | Percentile 75 | Percentile 90 |
| Chairman | 697 | 189 | 256 | 473 | 922 | 1,586 |
| Chief executive | 618 | 168 | 300 | 550 | 769 | 1,200 |
| Executive director | 477 | 116 | 210 | 398 | 650 | 967 |

Source: ADRRs and CNMV.

- The average salary of board members performing executive functions was 601,000 euros

The salaries of chairmen and CEO move in a similar range, while those of the remaining executive directors equate to roughly $70 \%$ of these.

- Salary tends to be the largest remuneration item of directors carrying out executive duties, accounting for $34.9 \%$ of their total pay.

Fixed remuneration

Fixed remuneration includes amounts received in cash with a pre-established payment frequency, which may or may not vest over time, as a consideration for directors' membership of the board, whether or not they actually attend its meetings.

Table 4 shows the average amount and percentiles of the fixed remuneration of chairmen, chief executives and remaining directors:

| (thousand euros) | Average | Percentile 10 | Percentile 25 | Percentile 50 | Percentile 75 | Percentile 90 |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |

| Chief executive | 133 | 32 | 55 | 80 | 145 | 214 |
| Executive director | 124 | 30 | 60 | 75 | 158 | 276 |
| Non-executive director | 86 | 26 | 44 | 75 | 110 | 171 |

Source: Company ADRRs and CNMV.

- A total of 105 companies ( $75.5 \%$ of the sample) paid fixed remuneration in 2016. Fixed pay per board came to 787,000 euros $10,6.1 \%$ more than in 2015 . $58.7 \%$ of total fixed remuneration corresponded to directors of Ibex 35 companies.
- The lowest percentiles are occupied by companies that set fixed pay without factoring specific board posts or responsibilities. At the median percentile, we can see board chairman earning proportionally more than other directors, while at higher percentiles external directors fall increasingly behind.

Attendance fees

Attendance fees are intended to remunerate directors for attendance at board meetings and, where applicable, at committee meetings.

Table 5 shows the average remuneration and percentiles of the attendance fees of chairmen, chief executives and other board members:

| Attendance fees |  |  |  |  |  | TABLE 5 |

| Non-executive director | 29 | 5 | 14 | 22 | 41 | 60 |

Source: Company ADRRs and CNMV.

- $\quad 56.8 \%$ of the companies analysed reported payments in this respect, averaging 238,000 euros per board.
- Directors received an average of 29,900 euros in attendance fees, $16.5 \%$ less than in 2015 .This item accounted for $4.9 \%$ of total remuneration in the year.

In this type of remuneration, as with attendance fees, the amounts received do not depend on the position held, but are calculated on the basis of the number of committees and meetings in which the director participates.

Table 6 shows the average amount and percentiles of remuneration for board committee membership of chairmen, chief executives and other board members:

| Remuneration for membership on board committees |  |  |  |  |  | TABLE 6 |

Source: Company ADRRs and CNMV.

- Directors received an average of 47,000 euros for serving on board committees, $7.8 \%$ less than in 2015.

Severance payments

Severance payments are any remuneration accruing to a director in respect of the termination of their relationship with the company, which includes any sum they have the right to receive in the event of early termination of said relationship, even if this is contingent, for example, on post contractual non-competition agreements.

Two ${ }^{11}$ companies made severance payments to two executive directors in 2016 for an average amount of 1 million euros.

Long-term savings systems and other remuneration benefits

Companies must give account in the ADRRs of all systems of long-term savings, including retirement and any other survivor benefits, partially or wholly funded by the company, whether provided internally or externally.

Table 7 shows contributions by companies to long-term savings schemes along with life insurance premiums paid:

- A total of 41 companies ( 22 from Ibex 35 members) contributed to savings schemes in 2016 on behalf of 78 directors ( 48 directors in Ibex 35 companies).

The average per company was 1.1 million euros, $22.6 \%$ down on 2015 as a result of the extraordinary contributions made by one company ${ }^{12}$ in 2015 to meet pension undertakings with its former and its incoming chief executive officer.

One company ${ }^{13}$ also made an additional contribution of 15 million euros in 2016 in respect of its outgoing chief executive officer.

In the 22 Ibex 35 companies that have contributed to the long-term savings schemes of 48 of their directors, the average amount of the contributions stood at 2 million euros. In six of these companies, which belong to the financial sector, the contributions averaged 5.3 million euros, while in the remaining 16 non-financial companies, this figure stood at 792,000 euros.

- A total of 46 companies declared that they have accumulated funds in investment vehicles covering the directors' saving schemes for an average amount per company of 10.2 million euros.

Three directors of two companies ${ }^{14}$ report accumulated funds for an amount exceeding 40 million euros, two other directors of two companies ${ }^{15}$ report accumulated funds for an amount between 20 and 40 million euros, and six directors of five companies ${ }^{16}$ report accumulated funds for an amount between 10 and 20 million euros.

Other items

Companies' ADRRs also have to state the total amount of remuneration accruing in the year that has not been reported under any of the above items.

These include remuneration in kind, which should be stated in the ADRR at the cost to the company of the director's use, consumption or acquisition of the goods, rights or services concerned.

BBVA.
Banco Popular.
Banco Santander and Telefónica.
ACS and Banco Popular.

A total of 79 companies reported other remuneration items summing 25.6 million euros in $2016,9.9 \%$ down on 2015 . This fall is largely explained by the extraordinary payment ${ }^{17}$ made by one company in 2015.

Variable remuneration

Like fixed remuneration, variable remuneration makes up a significant proportion of total director pay. In 2016, variable components accounted for $37 \%$ of total remuneration, down from $38 \%$ in 2015 . In non-Ibex 35 companies, this proportion fell by five percentage points.

Short-term variable remuneration

This item takes in variable payments accrued during periods of one year or less that are performance-related or linked to the achievement of individual or group targets.

Table 8 sets out the main percentiles of short-term variable remuneration with a breakdown by director category:

| Short-term variable remuneration |  |  |  |  |  |  |

- Short-term variable remuneration is almost exclusively confined to executive directors.
- In 2016, a total of 80 companies ( 34 from the Ibex 35) paid short-term variable remuneration to 191 directors ( 66 from the Ibex 35), averaging 398,000 euros per head ( 785,000 euros to directors in Ibex 35 companies), $4.8 \%$ down on 2015. In two companies ${ }^{18}$, this remuneration item exceeded 5 million euros.

Long-term variable remuneration in cash

This item refers to amounts accrued during periods of over one year that are perfor-mance-related or linked to the achievement of individual or group targets.

[^2]Table 9 sets out the main percentiles of long-term variable remuneration with a breakdown by director category:

| Long-term variable remuneration in cash |  | TABLE 9 |  |  |

- Directors received an average of 563,000 euros in this respect, $10.9 \%$ more than in 2015.

Variable remuneration in shares

This item includes amounts accrued under remuneration plans based on shares, share options or otherwise linked to the value of shares.

Table 10 breaks down the amounts of the remuneration accruing to directors through the delivery of shares or the estimated gross profit obtained in the year from exercising share options:

- In 2016, a total of 24 listed companies, including 13 members of the Ibex 35, remunerated their directors with 62.6 million euros under share-based schemes, of which 51.4 million euros corresponded to Ibex 35 companies.
- The average amount per director stood at 1.2 million euros, $37.9 \%$ up on 2015 . The maturity of multi-year share-based remuneration schemes in one company ${ }^{19}$ largely explains this growth.

Distribution of total remuneration by sector and market capitalisation

- Directors in the energy sector are the highest paid on average. However, in the top percentiles financial institutions also record above average pay.

Table 12 offers a breakdown of total remuneration per director according to market capitalisation group:

- As we can see from the table, total remuneration per director is higher among firms in the highest capitalisation bracket. On average, Ibex 35 directors receive six times more remuneration than their counterparts in smaller companies.

Executive director remuneration according to market capitalisation and company performance

Set out below are key statistics on the remuneration of executive directors (executive chairmen, chief executives and other executive directors) by item (fixed remuneration, short-term incentive schemes and long-term variable schemes), market capitalisation and company earnings.

Fixed remuneration

For the purpose of this analysis, fixed remuneration is taken as the sum of the following items: salaries for executive duties, fixed remuneration in respect of board membership, attendance fees and other remuneration for membership of board committees.

Table 13 shows the fixed remuneration of executive directors, with a breakdown by market capitalisation group:

Fixed remuneration according to market capitalisation*

- For all percentiles we can see that executive director remuneration is increasing with market capitalisation. In general, differences between companies as a function of capitalisation are accentuated in the lower percentiles.

Variable remuneration

Tables 14 and 15 show the distribution of short-term and long-term variable remuneration per executive director according to the company's results:

- The short-term variable remuneration of executive directors is proportional to the company's net profits, such that higher-earning firms on average pay more than their lower-earning counterparts across almost all percentiles.
- The maturity in 2016 of multi-year share-based remuneration schemes in one company ${ }^{20}$ meant that the long-term variable remuneration of executive directors was not proportional to the company's net profit.

III. Principles of remuneration policy

This section outlines the most characteristic features of the remuneration policies that listed companies have defined for application in 2017, and the criteria adopted to calculate the sums distributable to directors.

All Ibex 35 companies form part of this analysis, joined by a representative sample of 40 firms not belonging to the index.

Remuneration policy for 2016

Fundamentals

Every remuneration policy responds to principles and fundamentals which companies refer to in defining the main features of the items that will make up total director remuneration.

- The ADRRs of most companies set out the goals or principles behind their remuneration policy, with larger capitalisation companies providing greater detail.
- Listed below are the most common general principles of remuneration policy, which remain virtually unchanged with respect to the previous year:
(i) Attract, retain and motivate the best directors.
(ii) Ensure the sustainability of the company's business and earnings and generate long-term value for shareholders.
(iii) Award the achievement of strategic objectives, including prudent risk management and the generation of long-term value for shareholders.
(iv) Stay competitive in the remuneration market.
(v) Promote transparency regarding remuneration and the criteria on how it is determined.
(vi) Maintain a reasonable balance between fixed and variable components of remuneration.
- Financial institutions allude more frequently to principles regarding prudent risk management and the generation of value for shareholders.

Annual Report
on the Remuneration
of Directors of Listed
Companies
2016

- There is one listed company ${ }^{21}$ in which the director remuneration policy, as well as the policy for its management staff, was conditioned by the legislation applicable to State-owned companies. According to this legislation, remuneration paid to directors, both in their capacity as such and as a result of performing their executive functions, is predetermined by the regulation applicable to such companies and the competent bodies of the Central Government.

Criteria applied

- The most widely used criteria to determine the components of remuneration policy are the level of responsibility assumed by the director and the demands made on his or her time. Other criteria considered include the company's profits, mainly among companies outside the Ibex 35 , directors' qualifications, specialist knowledge and professional qualities and, among Ibex 35 members particularly, comparable market data.
- The criteria least taken into account are the company's solvency, capitalisation or sustainability.

Changes in remuneration policy with respect to the previous year

Forty-one of the 75 companies in the sample expressly mentioned in their ADRRs changes to be made in their remuneration policy for 2016. The most frequent changes concerned the implementation of long-term incentive schemes based on shares or linked to the share value, the amount of the basic remuneration items (fixed remuneration, attendance fees and salaries for executive functions), the strengthening of deferral periods and malus and claw-back clauses, increases in the number and type of indicators, particularly risk indicators, used to calculate directors' remuneration, and greater recourse to multi-year indicators.

Analysis of variable components of remuneration

Short-term variable remuneration

Annual incentives

All Ibex 35 companies and over $80 \%$ of non-Ibex 35 companies in the sample report the existence of short-term variable pay schemes for executive directors.

Measurement parameters

Two parameters are used on average to calculate short-term variable remuneration.

The most commonly used are internal parameters based on:

- financial indicators of profitability (operating profit or net profit). Other, less frequent parameters are linked to company turnover, total shareholder return or other financial ratios.
- qualitative indicators relating to an appraisal of the director's performance and compliance with the budget or strategic plan.

Significantly, almost half of all incentive schemes include a qualitative assessment.

Payment instruments

- Cash payment is the most widely used system for settling variable remuneration, applied in $61 \%$ and $70 \%$ of the schemes reported by Ibex and non-Ibex companies respectively
- Another alternative is to settle half of variable remuneration in shares and the other half in cash. Use of this payment instrument is almost entirely confined to financial institutions, and indeed is specified in sector regulations. Only four non-financial institutions, all Ibex 35 members, employed this system in 2016.

Deferral

11 Ibex 35 and one non-Ibex companies reported deferring payment of variable remuneration accrued in the short term. Of these 12, five were from outside the financial sector.

- Deferral mainly occurs in schemes where payment is half in shares and half in cash, and affects between $40 \%$ and $100 \%$ of variable remuneration, the average being $50 \%$.
- Schemes stipulate three years on average for receiving deferred variable remuneration, although this is extended to five years at two sample companies.

Non-Ibex companies were less likely to specify mandatory deferral, although the amounts deferred and deferral periods were similar in both groups.

Malus and claw-back clauses

According to the terminology of the latest European directives, malus clauses are risk adjustment mechanisms whereby companies need not pay the deferred part of variable remuneration accrued in previous years, if circumstances have arisen which substantially alter the company's medium-term results and sustainability, or if payment might impair its capitalisation.

Claw-back clauses allow companies to require their directors to return perfor-mance-based variable remuneration which is subsequently found to have been paid on the basis of manifestly misstated data.

Of the 63 companies in the sample operating short-term variable remuneration schemes, 14 of them ( 13 Ibex 35 and one non-Ibex member) refer to some kind of special clause that regulates their application in the short term. Normally, companies using malus clauses also provide for claw-back arrangements. It bears mention, however, that none of them indicated in their ADRR that they had triggered either of these clauses in the year just ended.

Multi-year incentives

A total of 43 companies in the sample ( 27 Ibex 35 and 16 non-Ibex) reported the existence of 60 multi-year incentive schemes ( 37 corresponding to Ibex 35 members and 23 to non-Ibex companies).

The most common types of long-term incentives were performance-based multi-year bonuses and performance-based awards of shares or options. Less prevalent were schemes based upon awarding stock appreciation rights.

Payment instruments

The most common system for paying these incentives is via the award of shares. $45 \%$ of schemes are settled in this way, while $32 \%$ are cash-settled and $20 \%$ in a combination of cash and shares. The ADRRs of the remaining $3 \%$ did not specify a payment instrument.

Measurement parameters

A vast majority of Ibex 35 companies structure their schemes around an average of two or three indicators, the most frequent being: operating profit, shareholder remuneration and share appreciation, and compliance with the group's budget or strategic plan. Some schemes, however, use as many as four or even five indicators. Non-Ibex 35 companies tend to use just one or two indicators, predominantly operating profit and shareholder remuneration.

Although some of these indicators are also used for short-term incentives, others are essentially confined to multi-year schemes, among them total shareholder return (TSR), share appreciation and cash flow generation.

Long-term savings systems

$63 \%$ of Ibex 35 companies and $45 \%$ of sample firms not belonging to the index report the existence of some kind of savings plan for executive directors to cover the contingencies of retirement, incapacity or death.

Most companies analysed, both members and non-members of the Ibex 35, had a single savings system for executive directors, usually a defined contribution scheme.

The ADRRs of 43 companies from the sample ( 26 Ibex 35 and 16 non-Ibex members) disclose some kind of severance clause upon the termination of executive directors. These clauses affect a total of 107 executive directors.

The severance payments provided for in the contract for directors (mainly executive directors) upon termination of the contractual relationship with the company are generally paid (unless the contract is terminated voluntarily by the director or as a result of a serious breach of his/her obligation). However, outside the banking sector, it is unusual for these clauses to establish that receipt of these amounts should be regulated by, or conditional upon, the company's performance or financial situation and that on the director's departure, the company will not be left in a poor economic or financial situation that might compromise its sustainability.

Consideration of risk management in remuneration policies

Measures to ensure that remuneration decisions are based on a sound risk management approach tend to focus on the calculation and payment of variable remuneration. Foremost among them are measures that pursue the sustainability of results, either by specifying accrual periods greater than one year or by including clauses for payment deferral or settlement in shares.

Regarding governance measures in relation with remuneration and their alignment with risk, a large number of companies, particularly financial institutions, state in their ADRRs that the board is empowered to modulate, reduce or cancel variable remuneration, subject to a report from the appointments and remuneration committee.

Application of remuneration policy in 2016

Result of the advisory vote on the previous year's report

A total of 15 Ibex 35 companies and 53 non-Ibex 35 companies obtained at least $95 \%$ of votes in favour of approving the 2015 ADRR at general meetings in 2016 where the remuneration report was submitted to a non-binding vote. One company obtained a negative vote of $53.1 \%$ of the votes cast.

Relationship between remuneration and profit

Most companies analysed go into greater or lesser depth in ADRRs on total remuneration and its correlation with net attributable profit. However, far fewer companies explain in their ADRRs the relationship between total board remuneration and individual directors' pay and the fulfilment of strategic targets or other measures of the company's performance.

Companies also tend to include insufficient explanations on the level of compliance with the targets, metrics and criteria set at the start of the year to calculate the variable remuneration of executive directors. Therefore, it is not always easy

Annual Report on the Remuneration of Directors of Listed Companies to properly understand the actual performance of executive directors in the previous year or by what methodologies and tools performance has been measured in order to provide adequate justification for the accrual of the remuneration item set out in the report.
2016

IV. Compliance with the unified ADRR model

Following the supervisory work performed on the reports submitted by listed companies, it may generally be concluded that, while there has been a slight improvement on previous years, the level of compliance with the different sections of the new unified ADRR model remains uneven.

As occurred the previous year, the breakdown of individual remuneration (Section D) was completed diligently by listed companies on the whole. However, the quality of the descriptions of the principles informing remuneration systems, particularly variable components, and the decision-making process varies significantly and is often insufficient.

Incidents detected in the review of 2016 reports were similar to those identified the previous year, the most significant being:

- Some companies are lax in informing about the amount of funds, vested or otherwise, accumulated in long-term savings schemes in favour of directors, especially when such schemes have been outsourced. Nor do they explain the conditions of directors' vested economic rights or the compatibility of longterm savings scheme benefits with severance payments, which might mislead the reader with regard to the time at which the director has the right to receive the financial benefits in the event of termination and for what amount. In this regard, severance payments should include any remuneration accruing to a director in respect of the termination of their relationship with the company, which includes any sum they have the right to receive in the event of early termination of said relationship, even if this is contingent on, for example, post contractual non-competition agreements.
- $\quad$ Some companies did not complete the tables relating to the share-based remuneration system when implemented through systems other than the award of share options, including, for instance, the deferred delivery of shares.
- Companies describe the performance assessment criteria linked to variable remuneration, but tend not to explain the methods or parameters used to determine whether such criteria have been met or the methodology applied to link the level of compliance with the remuneration accruing to the directors. Most also omit to provide an estimate of the variable remuneration payable under their current scheme according to the different possible levels of compliance with performance targets.
- The relative importance of variable versus fixed components (remuneration mix) in the company's remuneration policy for the year in progress has not been explained properly.

CNMV

of Directors of Listed

- Some companies are still misinterpreting the time-period references in ADRR sections when explaining their remuneration policy for the year in progress and previous years.
